attached training directive was issued in May by Abteilung Schulung of the Polizeipräsident of Berlin (Soviet Sector) to Abteilung Bereitschaft. [] it is a verbatim copy of the GAI (Hauptabteilung Grenz- und Bereitschaften) training directive, approved by the SMA, by which all Bereitschaften under GAI jurisdiction will be guided. It was received by the Polizeipräsident on 2 May and, by order of Polizeipräsident Paul Markgraf reissued as a guideline drawing up the monthly training plans of the Berlin police Bereitschaften.

Comment: The first Berlin Bereitschaft personnel entered training in October/November 1948. Basic training occupied the first three months, and the subsequent three months were in the main devoted to police technical training. Basic military training subjects in the second three months were reduced to refresher courses and range firing. In this advanced phase four out of the five and one half training days were devoted to police technical training, one to military training, and one half to political indoctrination.

April was more or less a transitional period, with the training of the preceding three months continued, but the training emphasis now had undergone a clear shift from police to tactical military training. Under the reported nine month training directive some individual training will remain, but there is increasing unit training ("Verbands-ausbildung").

Professionally judged, the Bereitschaften at the end of the nine month training will be qualified for small scale infantry combat, but not for combat cooperation with other arms such as armor or artillery.)

Comment: From a restricted ("nur für den Dienstgebrauch") official document, headed "Der Aufbau der Berliner Volkspolizei" (Structure of the Berlin Volkspolizei), undated, but presumably put out during the first half of May 1949, we quote: "Abt. Bereitschaften: Subordinated to it are the Polizeibereitschaften formations ready for combat (schlagkräftig), which are primarily intended for commitment as units (geschlossener Einsatz)."

T r a i n i n g P l a n

for Paramilitary Police Units

(Kasernierte Polizeibereitschaften)

for the Period From 1 May 1949 to January 1950

B a s i c A i m s

1. The principal training aims for the lower police units are the perfection of the police training of the individual, the squad, the platoon, and the Bereitschaft.
2. Perfect familiarity with the arms of the paramilitary police, and competent marksmanship.
3. Bringing to perfection the basic military training of the individual, the squad, the platoon, and the Bereitschaft.
4. The study of all tasks and directives pertaining to the Volkspolizei, and their practical application in the execution of police work.

Organizational Hints

1. The training program is planned to give a rounded police training to the paramilitary police.
2. The nine month training program is based on an eight hour day and a twenty six day month. On days before Sundays and holidays four hours will be devoted to training, and the remaining half day may be used for baths, laundry, and so forth.
3. Political training (Politische Schulung) will be given two hours per day, three days per week. Political training subjects will be scheduled in the general duty roster.

Political indoctrination (Polit-Informationen) will be scheduled for those days on which political schooling is not planned.

Political indoctrination is to be carried through before the first lesson, will last thirty minutes, and will deal with the most important events of the day as discussed in the progressive press.

4. Police training will be inspected by:
 - a) Training group leaders at the end of the training day.
 - b) Platoon leaders at the end of each week.
 - c) Bereitschaften commanding officers at the end of each month.
5. A record of all phases of police training will be kept by:
 - a) Platoon leaders of individuals and squads.
 - b) Bereitschaften commanding officers of squads and platoons.
6. Full responsibility for the training and schooling of the police units rests with the officers and staffs of the Bereitschaften. They will make high demands as to the level of training, and are to maintain a current check on the progress of training and the fulfillment of the training program.

P l a n n i n g

1. The planning of police training is to be carried out in accordance with the subject plan and the police schooling program.

The readiness of the paramilitary Bereitschaften for operations and tactical commitment (Einsatzbereitschaft) is at all times to be assured.

2. Special attention will be given to the consistency of the sequence of the training subjects, to a gradual transition from the simple to the complicated, and that the training subjects of the various training branches are interlinked.
3. The training plan will be prepared by the Bereitschaften commanding officers and the Polit-Kultur chiefs on the basis of painstaking study of the training program and of the results of the previous training month.

This must contain:

- a) A roster by subjects for each week of the month, with the number of exercises and hours allotted to each subject.
- b) A police training calendar listing:
 - aa) the subjects of the various training branches and the number of hours allotted to each subject,
 - bb) officers' training,
 - cc) training conferences, instruction on training methods and training demonstrations,
 - dd) inspection of and assistance to the lower units of the Bereitschaften,
 - ee) time schedule for the use of the rifle range, the training grounds, the sport grounds, the mess hall, the bath, etc.,
 - ff) a duty roster for interior duty and fatigue duties (Wirtschaftsarbeit).
- c) A plan covering political and cultural mass schooling (Breitenschulung), containing:
 - aa) monthly schedule of lectures, collective discussions, assemblies of Bereitschaft members,
 - bb) Mass sport affairs and competitive rifle firing,
 - cc) affairs of the Kulturaktive, movies, attendance at theaters, concerts, etc.
4. The training plan will be ready four days before the beginning of the new month and must be confirmed by the chief of Abteilung Bereitschaften.
5. The commanding officers of the Bereitschaften will conduct a work conference with their officers once a month, which will set forth the results of training during the preceding month and the assignments for the coming month. The same conferences will be held with the squad leaders in attendance.

6. At least every two months each Bereitschaft will be called together to discuss training results.
7. The duty roster for each week will be drawn up by the chief of staff (Stabschef) of Abteilung Bereitschaften and confirmed by the Bereitschaften commanding officers.
8. On the basis of the duty roster and of instructions issued by the Bereitschaften commanding officers, the platoon leader will prepare a platoon plan and instruct his squad leaders on the forthcoming exercises. Once a week he will confer with the squad leaders, extract the results of the training of the preceding week, and give out assignments for the coming week.

At least once a month he will call a general meeting of his platoon to discuss results of training given the preceding month.

Hints on Training Methods

1. The basis of training methods are practical demonstrations and a brief explanation of the manual of arms and other activities.
2. The Bereitschaften commanding officers will confer with and instruct the platoon leader on training methods. Between two and three hours will be devoted to each training subject as it comes to the platoon for execution.
3. The platoon leader will confer daily with the squad leaders and instruct them on training methods.
4. An example of how instruction conferences on training methods are to be handled:

The officer in charge of training checks on the knowledge of directives, the capability of giving proper commands, the execution of the manual of arms, and of commands.

He explains how the exercises are to be conducted and what kind of training aids are to be used. He explains the proper training methods as applied to the individual policeman or a subordinate unit. Subsequently he has the participants conduct exercises and tells them how to train their subordinates.
